

BASEBALL MAKES
FACES FRIENDLYThe Canadian and German Soldiers Leave Trenches to Talk it Over.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 8.—A Canadian infantry officer, just back from Flanders was in Washington and told this story:

Just before he left the trenches the British were ordered to attack the German trenches with hand grenades. After they had been hurling grenades industriously for a while, a protesting voice yelled from the German trenches, in English, "Aw, cut that out, you guys."

The man next to him in the British trenches was so astonished that he raised his head over the trench and called out, "Say, where in the hell are you from?"

"I'm from Buffalo," answered the man in the German trench. "Where are you from?"

"I'm from Toronto," answered the Canadian.

"Say, who is pitching for Toronto this season?" asked the German, leaning up over the trench.

Without reply, the Canadian began climbing from the trench. If you know anything about baseball come on out here and let's talk it over. The German climbed out too, and to about a minute, so my Canadian friends say, there was the finest talking bee that ever took place in Europe going on between the trenches. It was interrupted by the British and German officers frantically ordering the men back and severely punished. "You men will begin by talking baseball and next thing we know, you will both be shooting in the air when an attack is ordered," said the British officer in passing sentence.

Brickley Calls Harvard Champion—Why?

Peter Volo, Champion Trotter, To Retire

BY FRANK G. MENKE.

CHARLES BRICKLEY picks Harvard as the 1919 football champion, despite the fact that Cornell beat Harvard 10 to 9 and despite the fact that Cornell and Pittsburgh didn't lose a game throughout the season.

In face of the fact that Cornell scored 237 points in nine games against 164 by Harvard in the same number of games, Brickley thinks Harvard had the better team. Charles explains that he picks Harvard, not because of his alma mater, but because:

(1) When Cornell beat Harvard the Crimson team hadn't reached its top form.

(2) Cornell couldn't have run up 41 points on Yale.

Isn't it funny how an education at Harvard will twist a person's viewpoint?

"Gunboat" Smith defeated Jess Willard over the 20 round decision route, Jim Coffey knocked out "Gunboat" in four rounds and Frank Moran disposed of Coffey in three rounds. And now you may prepare for the inevitable Moran's claim that he is a better man than Willard.

Jim Gaffney probably plans to have the tongues of his players removed. He recently said: "My Braves must not use profanity next season. I will stamp out the practice at any cost."

Peter Volo, the champion trotter, will be retired to the stud next season, according to the announcement of the owner, W. E. D. Stokes. This move is a big surprise to the harness world, as Peter Volo will not be five years old until January 1, and seems now at the height of his wonderful career. He holds the two, three and four year old records, and has not reached the limit of his speed.

Doc White, once White Sox pitcher, who was released recently as manager of the Vernon (Cal.) club, has just inherited through the death of his father, $25,000.

Lee Fohl, manager of the Indians, takes rank as one of the best little prognosticators in existence. We have overlooked the fact that Fohl called the turn on the world series until Jacob Starky, 2924 Holland avenue, Erie, Pa., sent us a clipping of Fohl's prediction made a week before the series began.

"I cannot see anything but the Red Sox for the world's championship. Five games ought to settle it. Alexander may beat the Sox in the first game, but they will get him after that."

Alexander, as you will remember, won the first game, the Sox beat him in the second start and the Sox won out in five games.

"Cupid" Black, who performed guard duty for the so-called "football team" that represented Yale this season, in-born in a bakery during the summer months. He secured the bread from the ovens after the bread has been baked sufficiently.

The Cardinals spent $155 for baseballs during 1918 against $232 in 1917.

Some folks think peanuts a blessing; old Pete takes the opposite view. Included in the latter squad is a person named Quigley, who absorbs education at the University of Pennsylvania.

Quigley, after hard work, landed the job as varsity quarterback on the eleven. He celebrated by eating peanuts. The coach caught him in the act and fired him off the squad. He said Quigley felt badly about it. That is surprising. Some folks, after view of Pennsylvania's gridiron showing, in 1915 would think it a blessing not to have been forced to play the team.

Building Permits.

To McClintock Company, to erect a billboard at 1217 East Boulevard; estimated cost $40.

To L. Semanick, to make changes and repairs at 308 Lawton street and build a frame garage; estimated cost $750.

To A. C. Patterson, to make changes and repairs at Fred Feldman's residence, estimated cost $11.
